

FROM THE TWENTY-SEVENTH REGIMENT.

To the Editor of The Detroit Free Press:

CAMP WISNER, Ypsilanti, March 26.

We, as commissioned officers of the Twenty-seventh Regiment Michigan Infantry Volunteers, having a deep interest in its prosperity, feel called upon to notice several communications purporting to come from some one here, and which you have permitted, probably, with no intention of injuring the regiment or its commanding officer, to appear in your columns. We would not notice these articles but for the effect they may have abroad, and possibly may affect the success of some of our officers absent recruiting in different parts of the State. We pronounce all the changes so far as relates to the unpopularity of Colonel Fox with his command; and, also, as to severe and unnecessary punishments, as well as desertions from the regiment, as false. True, there have been desertions as well from this as other regiments, and, perhaps, more, because of the consolidation of two—always leading to more or less dissatisfaction. Under the circumstances, however, under which Col. Fox took command of the two parts of regiments. No man in the State could have better arranged and conciliated the conflicting interests of both officers and men, than did our respected Colonel. Equally untrue is the charge of neglect of care of the men. No officer could look more closely to their welfare, and woe be to the contractor who attempts to withhold from them their proper rations, or furnish those of inferior quality. Col. Fox looks to the morals, health and good discipline of officers and men—and we invite the citizens of our State to visit every department of this command, and we challenge comparison with any regiment, old or new, in all respects, particularly as to cleanliness, good order, discipline and drill.

We address you this communication for publication, not for any partizan purpose—for we are about equally divided in our political views and attachments to democratic and republican parties. We have reason to believe every officer absent would with us join in this expression if here. We believe you will cheerfully give publicity to this unanimous expression of the officers present.
